MICHAEL J. TUTE DIES WHILE BEING TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Asthma, Brought on by Intense Heat, Proves Fatal to Best Known Veteran at Home.

GAINS FAME AS 'WIDE AWAKE'

Thousands Recall Warning Cry of Old Man as He Stood at the Junction in Kansas City, Safeguarding Pedestrians.

Michael T. Tute, known to the residents of the two Kansas Cities, Independence, Mo., and hundreds of Leavenworth people as "Wide Awake," the dean of the inmates of the Soldiers'
Home and a veteran of the Civil War, will no longer be a familiar figure at baseball games and on the grounds at the Soldiers' Home. He died at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning while being taken in an ambulance from his home, Second and Cedar streets, to the Soldiers' Home Hospital. Death was attributed to asthma, superinduced by the excessive heat.

Until twelve years ago Tute stood at Ninth and Main streets, known as

The best proof. Read it:

Charles Brown, 1003 W. Chester St., Leavenworth, Kan., says: "I suffered from severe attacks of backache and ever I lifted or stooped, sharp darts darted through my loins.
Spells and headaches bothered me and the secretions from my kidneys passed too frequently and contained sediment. At nights I was unable to get my proper rest and this resulted in a tired, worn-out feeling.
Not until I took Doan's Kidney Pills was I relieved. They entirely corrected the trouble. Another family used Doan's Kidney Pills when suffering from kidney trouble and soon got relief. I can only confirm my former experience."

If your back aches—if your nerves bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same Mr. Brown had—the remedy

sive heat.

Until twelve years ago Tuite stood at Ninth and Main streets, known as the Junction, in Kansas City as crossing watchman for the Metropolitan street car company. His unceasing vigilance gained him a reputation that few working men ever enjoy. Rich and poor alike were "Wide Awake's" friends. Many lives did he save by jerking a reckless pedestrian from in front of cars. His cry of "wide awake there" was as familiar then as were the cable cars of the Metropolitan.

KNEW THEM ALL

But few people ever enjoyed the distinction of knowing as many people as did "Wide Awake" in Kansas City. Those who passed the corner where he was stationed daily soon became known to the old Irishman and among his friends were millionaires and men of prominence. The late P. D. Armour, while on his way to his office each morning, would stop long enough for a little chat with the witty and genial "Wide Awake," and on leaving would invariably present the crossing watchman with a ten cent cigar.

May 24, 1912, "Wide Awake" wearing his faded suit of soldier's blue stepped from a Leavenworth car at the Junction in Kansas City and went over the pavement in front of the ticket office. Hundreds of persons recognized him and for two hours he held a reception with old friends.

When funds for the erection of Convention Hall were solicited by selling buttons a contest was arranged by which Convention Hall Button No. 1 was to go to the most popular man in the city. When the vote was counted "Wide Awake's" name was near the top of the list, being above many men prominent in affairs.

"Awake" came west. His first station was with the Missouri railroad at Kansas City. For a number of years he acted as yardmaster for the company there. Later he entered the employ of the Metropolitan. He was married to Miss C. Davis of Independence, Mo., five years ago. His widow and daughter, who lives at Co. Springs, survive.

The body will be shipped to Independence Saturday morning by Davis Undertaking Company. Rev. Father Gleason of Independence Avenue Parish of Kansas City officiate at the funeral services. The interment will be at Capital Hill cemetery.

HEALTH FAILS.

Twelve years ago "Wide Awake's" health failed and he was compelled to give up his position in Kansas City. He came to Leavenworth and entered the Soldiers' Home. Practically from the first he took a position in the front rank among the prominent members of the Home. Every member of the institution knew him, not by the name of Tuite but as "Wide Awake." As in the days when he stood at the Junction he was everybody's friend.

As a baseball fan he was known to Leavenworth folk who attended the games at the Soldiers' Home. He would sit on the players bench and his eyes never left the ball field as the players scampered about while a game was in progress. His judgment of players and his knowledge of the fine points of the game was that of an expert. During the past season the Home ball diamond has not looked as familiar as in former years for "Wide Awake" was unable to attend the games but infrequently. He was on the bench for the last time, three weeks ago yesterday.

NATIVE OF IRELAND.

"Wide Awake" was born in Ireland about 65 years ago. When a lad of ten years he ran away from home and left his native land as a stow-away. For several years he was a sailor lad and traveled to all parts of the world.

A year previous to the outbreak of the Civil War "Wide Awake" landed
